

GB Construction

Whether you are an owner, general contractor, construction manager, trade, or any other professional in the construction industry, you have spent your entire career building your business and professional reputation. You can lose it all through the improper handling of a single large claim. Why trust the handling of your claims to someone who does not have specialized expertise in this area?

When a claim is wrapped in complexity, you need a specialist to unravel it. Construction claims are different than other types of claims and require special expertise. Laws are continually developing, with some statutes very state specific. Litigation frequently involves multiple parties asserting various, diverse, innovative, and unique coverage positions. The claims today are more complex than ever. Accordingly, the proper handling of these claims requires an in depth knowledge of the industry, the insurance coverage, the applicable laws, and the parties.

Recognizing the emerging need to address complex claims in the construction industry, Gallagher Bassett has created a Liability Construction practice group comprised of dedicated, seasoned claims professionals, many of whom hold advanced degrees in law or other areas that support the construction industry, and all of whom have spent their careers working towards resolution of complex construction claims.
